John A. Klein In Committeeman Race

John A. Klein has entered the race for precinct committeeman on the Republican ticket for the Orland Park precinct. Mr. Klein is connected with the State Game Department. He was instrumental in getting state bond issue route 51 to go thru Orland Park limits and has been instrumental in putting over a number of other worthy things for his community and his friends have desired to show him their appreciation of his good work by running him for the office of committeeman. The primaries are to be held April 10th.

Orland Park To Vote on Bond Issue

Orland Park is to have a municipal wave of improvement from present indications this spring. The first in line is a new village hall and fire department quarters. It is proposed to ask for a vote on a bond issue at the April village election for the purpose of paying a bond issue to defray the cost of the contemplated improvement.

Orland Park is to see a big boom in sidewalk construction this spring. The project calls for the laying of new concrete sidewalks in the Nichols subdivision at an estimated cost of $35,000. The work is to be done on the special assessment plan.

Take Roads Out of Politics Says Louis Emmerson

Farm relief thru decreased taxation and an intelligent system of secondary neighborhood roads were stressed this week by Louis L. Emmerson, Republican candidate for Governor as two of the foremost planks in his platform. He started his second week's speaking tour on Monday at Morris, and continued thru Central Illinois Tuesday and Thursday accompanied at various places by Oscar Carlstrom, candidate for Attorney General, and Otis F. Glenn, candidate for United States Senator.

Mr. Emmerson declared that the farmer and small home owner are now carrying the burden of state and local government taxes, because of the state's antiquated revenue system, and he blamed the State Tax Commission for failing to perform its duties in a way to remedy the situation.

"It is a recognized fact," he continued, "that real estate and farm lands bear much more than their just proportion of taxes. Visible property is caught by the assessor and intangible property escapes."

"I propose, if I am elected Governor, to undertake as one of the major policies of my administration the working out of a sound, honest and efficient taxing system which will equalize the burden."

"The vehicle for performing this important task is already in existence. It is the duty of the state tax commission, appointed by the Governor and answerable to him for its acts, to study the tax laws of other states and countries and to report to the legislature on methods of improving the Illinois law. The commission has extensive powers of supervision and control over all assessment processes, but it has never exercised these powers. Since 1922 it has been going thru the motions of equalizing assessments between counties and between classes of property, but these equalized values have not been reported back to local officials and the levies have been made on assessments as they passed the county boards."

"One of the first things I shall do, if I am elected Governor, is to select a tax commission which will function properly and perform the duties imposed upon it by law."

The great majority of the farms and small communities of the state get little benefit from the hard roads, Mr. Emmerson said, because they are not directly on them.

"It is of the utmost importance that we work out some plan for the surfacing of these secondary neighborhood roads. They need not be concrete, because the traffic on them is not as heavy as on the main arteries, but they should have a hard durable surface that will make them serviceable in all seasons. I promise you if I am elected Governor, to undertake the perfection of a plan for doing this work. It can be done with out expense to the general taxpayer. We can, by careful planning and economic construction, extend the benefits of pavement to hundreds of thousands, providing hard roads not only for thru traffic using main arteries but for local and neighborhood service."

"Only five percent of the highways of Illinois have been paved. Ninety five per cent of our roads are dirt and during several months of the year are impassable. We have not completed road construction; we have only begun to build."

"Political use of the public road funds is too high a price to pay for improvements financed with public money. You do not need to pay it. Your roads can be built more rapidly, the system can be extended and the work can be done at less cost under a business administration pledged to take the roads out of politics."

Rural Sections Want Good Roads

The question of good roads is one that is receiving a good deal of attention at the present time.

From every side comes a constantly growing demand for road improvement, and this is especially true of the isolated rural sections.

This demand on the part of our rural population for better roads is a reasonable one, and is mainly due to the fact that the automobile is now recognized and used by nearly all as the logical method of transportation to and from the farm.

The result of this demand is that more consideration is being given to the improvement of dirt roads, by our highway officials today than ever before, and we can expect to see many miles of our dirt roads improved with stone or cement paving in the near future.

The farmers themselves could aid materially in improving the condition of the roads and making them more passable by means of the road drag, a liberal use of which helps to keep the ruts filled in, allowing the surface to dry up more rapidly after a rain.

Another way by which the farmers could aid in improving road conditions, would be by the removal of all hedge fences adjoining public highways.

A hedge fence is a relic of the by gone past. It has served its day and generation, and is today considered a nuisance to its owner and the public alike, and ought to be destroyed.

Where it is permitted to grow up untrimmed, it constitutes a danger to the travelling public, at road intersections on account of obstructing the view of approaching vehicles from opposite directions.

A hedge fence affects the condition of a road, because of the fact that it holds the moisture thru its long roots, and its branches shade the road way preventing the sun's rays from effectively drying up the surface of the road.

Then again in the winter months the hedge fences are responsible for nearly all of our snow blocked roads, as any observer can note after a blizzard.

If the amount of time spent on shoveling out snow blocked highways and trimming down hedges, could be applied to pulling out and destroying these hedges, they would soon cease to exist, thereby improv-

EDITORIAL

We often hear it said that politics are rotten, but do we stop to think whose fault it is that they are so?

The voter is directly to blame for this condition. We often find that four flushing candidates are the ones who get the votes, while the honest man has no more show than a jack rabbit in many instances.

We have had a fine example of this kind of legislator in the Illinois legislature which has been characterized as a "wild orgy of extravagance" in expenditure of the state's money. Millions are often appropriated with recklessness political trading, back scratching and swapping are resorted to to get certain measures through.

In this wild conglomeration of political Sahara desert it is hard for the voter to find an oasis, as there are few politicians who are not lined up with a certain machine or group and must take orders from them and do their bidding instead of looking for the welfare of their constituents.

It is high time that the Illinois legislature had an honest to goodness house cleaning and it is up to the voters to do it. Let us begin in right here in the 41st senatorial district to send men to the legislature who will serve as statesmen and not merely as politicians.

Among the various candidates in the 41st senatorial district who are candidates for the legislature at the April 10 primary, one stands out like an oasis in the political desert and this outstanding character is Don C. Hall of Mokena.

He is schooled in legislature procedure and his judgment is sound. Mr. Hall is a clean cut, honest-to-the-core gentleman, and you know where to find him at all times. There is no straddling the fence with him.

He stands four square for efficient, honest and intelligent administration of the affairs of state and the interest and welfare of his constituents are paramount over all other matters.

He is not subservient to any bosses and stand out alone and independent from all political entanglements.

Mokena should be mighty glad and proud to have such a man in its midst and he should receive a majority vote at the primary in this precinct. Mokena be alive to your opportunity of sending one of your own citizens to the legislature, one who will not only be a credit to your own community but to the entire 41st senatorial district.

Don C. Hall is not a politician, he is a STATESMAN.

This is the first time in the history of Mokena that one of its citizens has aspired to the candidacy of a state office and our candidate must go over big. Give him a big support and show the entire district that you are loyal to your own community and people. Be sure and vote at the primary April 10, 1928.

In order that Don C. Hall may have a majority vote in this precinct the voters may give him 3 votes by placing an x in front of his name only on the Republican primary ballot

POLITICAL ROAD JUGGLING

Some weeks ago the News-Bulletin office was called on the phone by Hon. Fred Francis, Supervisor of New Lenox township, who had just returned from Springfield where a road conference had been held. Mr. Francis advised that the state highway department had placed Wolf road from the Cook and Will County line thru Mokena to the Lincoln Highway on the proposed bond issue map and this news was published in the columns of the News-Bulletin. In last week's issue we printed the report from the Mokena Improvement Association meeting and the names of certain candidates receiving the Association's endorsement.

Early this week, Mr. Francis and others visited the News-Bulletin office with threats of dire vengeance and the editor for presuming to publish the news, and intimated that there would be a wholesale "slaughter of the innocents," by a wiping of Wolf road from off the map.

We clip the following from the March 14 issue of the Joliet Herald-News:

Owens Underground Farm

One of the strangest farms in the world is the great subterranean acreage of Howard Bell of Crittenden, N. Y., on which he raises huge crops of mushrooms. Seeking means to cultivate the delicacy, which thrives without daylight, on a wholesale scale, Bell conceived the idea of using an abandoned cement mine. The results were even better than he anticipated.

Throughout the entire underground agricultural plant a temperature of from 47 to 51 degrees is maintained the year round, this being ideal for the product.—Popular Science Monthly.

Drink Water If Back or Kidneys Hurt

Begin Taking Salts If You Feel Backache or Have Bladder Weakness

Too much rich food forms acids which excite and overwork the kidneys in their efforts to filter it from the system. Flush the kidneys occasionally to relieve them like you relieve the bowels, removing acids, waste and poison, else you may feel a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, the stomach sour, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get irritated, obliging one to get up two or three times during the night.

To help neutralize these irritating acids and flush off the body's urinous waste, begin drinking water. Also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine and bladder disorders disappear.

This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys and stop bladder irritation. Jad Salts is inexpensive and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to help prevent serious kidney and bladder disorders. By all means, drink lots of good water every day.

STATE CAPITOL NEWS

Hiram L. Williamson,
Illinois Press Association

Governor Small has issued a proclamation designating the week of April 1 as health promotion week for the fifty-two counties of southern Illinois and the week beginning Sunday, April 22, for the fifty counties of northern Illinois. The governor calls upon the communities of the state to generally observe the week and the state department of public health is designated as the official agency to develop suitable programs.

Abraham Lincoln was called handsome once in his life, it has been disclosed by a search of records by Professor Sumner of the University of Wisconsin, who has unearthed a speech delivered by Lincoln at the Wisconsin state fair at Milwaukee on September 30, 1850. At the time of the speech a newspaper reporting the event said that Lincoln "looked like a man made for wading in deep water. The women say he is homely," continued the writer, "but I say he is handsome. He looks like an open-hearted, honest man grown sharp in fighting knaves. He appears very much like Henry Clay without the light complexion and fiery enthusiasm. His address was short, sweet, Lincolnian. It did not please everybody, I suppose, and therefore it was something positive and good."

Highways are glorified, and particularly Illinois highways, in a 500-page book written by Prof. C. C. Wiley of the University of Illinois department of highway engineering and published by the New York book firm of McGraw-Hill. "Without the highways," Professor Wiley states in his book, "it would be impossible to build, maintain or operate the railroads, water routes or airways, nor would it be possible to establish and make use of any of the means of communication. The highway system spreads its ramifications throughout every city, village or countryside. It links together every industry and reaches every home."

Hinton G. Clabaugh, chairman of the pardon and parole board of the state of Illinois, has made more than one hundred addresses in the last few months before associations, clubs and various other organizations and over the radio, discussing "The Crime Situation in Illinois." His purpose is to acquaint the public with facts regarding the making of criminals and the efforts being made to prevent crime.

The new state highway system from Benton to Harrisburg will be ready for travel by midsummer, according to developments of the last few days. All the sections of this 30-mile road have been let to contractors and assurances have been given that the work will be started as soon as weather conditions will permit. The Madison Construction company of Edwardsville and the Hamilton-Hoffman company of Carbondale were the lowest bidders on the several sections and these firms will construct most of the highway. The Zeigler-West Frankfort-Thompsonville route and the Sneed highway from Herrin to Sesser are two other roads to be built in Franklin county this summer, and when these three roads have been completed the hard road mileage of Franklin county will have nearly doubled.

Professors who deplore large enrollments in public educational institutions were classed as "advanced morons" by Dr. William Oxley Thompson, president emeritus of Ohio State university, who addressed several hundred alumni and students at the University of Illinois' sixtieth anniversary of foundation recently.

"Many faculty members," he said, "profess the belief that education is good for the best and bad for the worst. They should remember nothing is taught until something is learned and that beginning morons among the students are no worse than advanced morons among faculty members."

With the completion of the new traffic bridge over the Mississippi river at Louisiana, Mo., on April 1, 1928, the highway route from Illinois to Kansas City and points west will be shortened approximately 75 miles.

The bridge, named in honor of Champ Clark, late speaker of the house of representatives, will cost approximately $1,000,000. The structure will be part of United States Highway No. 54, which extends from Pittsfield, Ill., ten miles east of the river, in a southwest direction to Vaughn, N. M., where it connects with U. S. Highway No. 70.

The bridge will do away with the necessity of going to St. Louis, which at present provides traffic delays as well as longer mileage.

The Keokuk Electric company has filed a petition with the Illinois commerce commission for permission to discontinue the operation of its interurban service between Keokuk, Iowa, and Hamilton, Hancock county, on April 30.

William J. Stratton, Ingleside, director of the state department of conservation, has tendered his resignation to Governor Small, effective immediately. Mr. Stratton is a candidate for the Republican nomination for secretary of state.

Few people realize the importance of the duties devolving upon the Auditor of Public Accounts Oscar Nelson. His office is probably one of the most important in the state cabinet. Not only does he have the supervision of some 1,340 banks, but also something like 935 building and loan associations, together with the trust companies—both state and national—title guarantee companies, wage loan corporations, pawn brokers' societies and credit union associations. He also has charge of all the land titles of the state, including the original grants and patents from the government and state; collects all the revenues of the 102 counties of the state from the various taxing bodies, and issues all the warrants for the state of Illinois, which run into hundreds of thousands per year. Every salary, invoice and contract of the state is paid by warrant, all of which are issued through the office of the auditor of public accounts and is, in itself, a very large department. With the growth of the state's business this feature of the auditor's office has increased materially in the last two or three years.

The following contracts on pavement, bridges and grading were announced a few days ago by the state division of highways:

Route 89, section 123B, Marshall county, bridge; Herick Construction company, Carlinville, $29,165.42.

Route 142, section 115B, Hamilton county, bridge; Watt Construction company, Winchester, $31,682.34.

Route 88, section 123, Stark county, bridge; A. P. Munsen, Marion, $8,928.36.

Route 116, section 113, Livingston county, pavement; Indiana Road Paving company, Rochester, Ind., $132,240.59.

Route 142, section 115A, Hamilton county, grading; Higgins Dyer and company, Granite City, $36,017.37.

Route 96, section 126, Adams county, pavement; Cameron Joyce, Smith Elder company, Keokuk, Iowa, $108,907.47.

Route 128A, section 101, Bond county, Nelson Construction company, Jerseyville, $27,515.65.

"Illinois does not want the earth—adhering to the roots of imported rose bushes," O. T. Olsen, superintendent of plant industry remarks, in submitting to Director Stanard of the state department of agriculture his January report of service rendered in the division he heads.

There were 514,700 plants in the shipments of Manetti rose bush nursery stock received in Illinois during the month, the report reveals. Of these, 24,000 had European soil adhering to the roots. Plant inspection officials say they have no objection to the soil itself, but as some plant diseases may be brought into the state in this manner, a quarantine regulation forbids the entrance of such soil.

In order to guard against insect pests and plant diseases invading nurseries and florists' stocks, the consignees of these 24,000 plants that entered Illinois in violation of the quarantine were required to wash them thoroughly and to treat the roots with live steam.

"Conscientious scruples" against infliction of the death penalty and cancellation of the contract for construction of two electric chairs will not prevent adoption of electrocution in Illinois. The contract for the chairs and attached apparatus for the two state penitentiaries was awarded to the W. D. Allison Co., Indianapolis, Ind., some time ago, but the head of that concern experienced a change of heart and cancelled his contract a few days ago. W. J. Lindstrom, supervising engineer, division of architecture and engineering, in charge of building the death houses at Joliet and Chester, has awarded the contract to S. M. Briggs Co., Rising Sun, Ind., with the stipulation that installation must be completed for the execution of Joseph Bella, Vermilion county, who will pay the penalty for the killing of Julia Flaherty, Danville. The electric chair in the Cook county jail has been in place for a month.

Edward C. Fitch, sixty-five, assistant attorney general for the last eleven years and originator of the Good Fellow movement in the United States to dispense Christmas cheer and aid to the unfortunate and needy, died in St. John's hospital in Springfield a few days ago. Because of his familiarity with the Illinois statutes and the basic law on which they are founded, Mr. Fitch's advice was frequently sought by attorneys from all parts of the state.

Illinois produced 20,000,000 tons less coal during 1927 than she did during 1926, a report just issued by A. D. Lewis, director of mines and minerals, shows. This large reduction in the production of coal was attributed to the prolonged coal strike in 1927. The total output during the last year was 44,814,776 as compared with 67,836,441 in 1926. The year report shows 14,501 persons injured and 101 persons killed.

A dangerous cattle disease, known as contagious pyelonephritis, heretofore unknown in Illinois, was discovered a few days ago in Fayette county by cattle experts from the University of Illinois college of agriculture.

It is impossible to judge the significance of the disease, due to inability to trace the source of infection, declared Dr. Robert Graham, animal hygienic expert at the college. It does mean, he said, that a contagious kidney disease exists, which breeders and herd owners must recognize.

Lesson for March 18

JESUS TEACHES SINCERITY

LESSON TEXT—Mark 7:1-23.
GOLDEN TEXT—Keep thy heart with all diligence, for out of it are the issues of life.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Obeying God and Our Parents.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Honoring God and Our Parents.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Sincerity in Religion.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Jesus Denounces Formalism.

I. The Emptiness of Formal Worship (vv. 1-7).

The tendency of the human heart is to depart from the life and to choose the mere form which is calculated to express the life. The traditions and customs adopted by men for the temporary help of the spiritual life frequently are crystallized into laws and made to supersede the laws and institutions of God.

1. The charge against Christ (v. 2). This was that Christ's disciples ate bread with unwashed hands. The charge was not on the basis of physical uncleanness, but their disregard of custom which was to engage in the thorough washing of the hands before eating, as well as washing the pots and vessels.

2. Examples of empty forms (vv. 2-4).

(1) Washing of the hands before eating (v. 3). They not only washed their hands often but diligently and intensely.

(2) Washing of cups, tables, pots and brazen vessels. The ceremonial washing applied to the vessels as well as the hands.

3. Explanation demanded by the Pharisees (v. 5). They asked Christ to explain why His disciples ignored the tradition of the elders with reference to ceremonial cleansing.

4. Christ's answer (vv. 6, 7). He declared that worship which centered in forms was as empty and meaningless as was lip service where the heart was away from God. This He calls hypocrisy, even such as foretold by Isaiah, the prophet. Men of his day made much of external observance and of religious rites, while their hearts remained unchanged.

II. Making the Word of God of None Effect (vv. 8-13).

1. How it may be done (v. 8). It was done by punctiliously observing the precepts of man, such as washing of the hands, pots, etc., while ignoring the commandments of God. This is being done by those who make much of the externalities of religion but at the same time are indifferent to the moral requirements.

2. An instance cited (vv. 9-13).

The law of God as given by Moses said, "Honor thy father and thy mother, and whoso curseth father or mother, let him die the death; but ye say, if a man shall say to his father or mother, it is Corban, that is to say, a gift, by whatsoever thou mightest be profited by me, he shall be free, and ye suffer him no more to do ought for his father or his mother." The law of God demands of children that they care and provide for parents in their need. According to an accepted tradition among the Jews, if a man should consecrate his goods or possessions to the Lord's service by pronouncing over them the word "Corban," which means "the gift," his goods would be thus dedicated to God, and would not be available for help to his parents. It was possible, therefore, for a man to be enjoying wealth while his parents were in destitution.

III. The Real Source of Defilement and Impurity (vv. 14-23).

1. Sin is moral and spiritual. Uncleanness before God is not of the body save as the body is directed by the soul. A man is not defiled by that which enters his mouth but by that which springs out of his soul.

2. That which springs out of the heart—the deliberate choice of the will—is the source of defilement (v. 20).

3. A list of evils springing out of the heart (vv. 21, 22). The awful list is as follows:

Evil thoughts, adulteries, fornications, murders, thefts, covetousness, wickedness, deceit, lasciviousness, an evil eye, blasphemy, pride, foolishness, which all come from within. This catalogue includes every possible form of evil. Every one of them originate in the heart and when they become acts of the will and life they defile the man. It is only when temptations and solicitations lead to indulgence by the deliberate act of the will that they corrupt a man.

DELECTABLE MUSHROOMS

A tablespoonful of mushrooms added to a sauce will give such a flavor and add to its daintiness, that without them, leaves the dish very ordinary. During the season when they are plentiful they may be gathered, canned, pickled or dried so that when they are very high priced fresh they may still be available. Fresh mushrooms are usually simmered in butter for five minutes before they are added to any sauce, gravy or other dish.

Mushroom Soup.—Take one-half pound of cleaned, peeled and chopped mushrooms, cover with one quart of chicken or veal stock, with a teaspoonful of minced onion and one-half teaspoonful of salt, one-eighth teaspoonful of pepper and a dash of cayenne. Cook for half an hour, then put through a puree strainer. Add one cupful of the stock thickened with two tablespoonfuls each of butter and flour with one cupful of cream. Reheat in a double boiler, whip with an egg beater and top with a spoonful of whipped cream.

Florida Mushrooms With Rice.—Whip into a pint of well-seasoned white sauce two tablespoonfuls of grated cheese and one cupful of cooked rice which has been drained and rinsed in cold water. Add one-half pound of mushrooms that have been cooked in three tablespoonfuls of butter and seasoned with salt and pepper with a bit of mace. Pour into a baking dish, cover with grated cheese and brown quickly in a hot oven.

Savory Mushrooms.—Use one quart of canned tomatoes, one small onion minced, one teaspoonful of sugar, salt, pepper and cayenne to taste and a teaspoonful of Worcestershire sauce. Cook until smooth and thickened. Add one can of mushrooms or half a pound of fresh ones cooked in butter and seasoned with salt and pepper. Pour into a buttered baking dish, top with buttered crumbs and brown in a hot oven for fifteen minutes.

Mushrooms en Brochette.—Select large mushrooms, peel the caps and cook in boiling salted water for ten minutes. Alternate the mushrooms with oysters and squares of bacon on skewers. Lay them in a shallow pan and bake in a hot oven for fifteen minutes, until the bacon is crisp and the oysters plump. Serve on strips of buttered toast and pour the pan drippings over them.

Marmalades.

The season to prepare the marmalades is at the time the fruits are the cheapest. A most delicious marmalade may be made from the kumquat.

Kumquat Marmalade.—Be sure that the fruit is well ripened, wash and cut into halves, removing the seeds; cover with water and let stand overnight. In the morning set on to cook until tender. Drain and add an equal measure of sugar, cook until thick. If one wishes the candied fruit remove the fruit and cook down the syrup, dip into the syrup, roll in sugar and place in the sun to dry.

Carrot Marmalade.—This makes a most economical and a very good conserve. Grate twelve large carrots—the new ones are to be preferred. Measure the carrot pulp and for each cupful allow one cupful of sugar. Let stand overnight; in the morning add the juice of three lemons and one orange, strained. Cook slowly for one hour, or until thick. Pour into glasses and seal if to be kept.

Date Marmalade.—Cut and chop one package of dates, add three cupfuls of water and cook until smooth. Add one-fourth of a cupful of lemon juice and the juice of an orange; add one-half cupful of sugar and cook until thick. If desired slice the orange very thin and cook in some of the water until tender, then add to the date mixture; this gives the flavor of the peel which is so well liked.

The following is a different marmalade than is usually made, the seeds adding the bitter flavor which the English like so well:

Lemon Marmalade.—Use a dozen lemons and one and one-half pounds of sugar to each pound of fruit and water.

To make: Cut lemons into very thin slices, remove but keep the seeds. Add a pint of cold water for each pound of fruit and let stand overnight. In the morning boil gently until the fruit is tender, and again set aside until cold. Weigh and add sugar in the proportions named above. Put the seeds into cheesecloth bag and cook with the fruit. Cook until the whole is thick and transparent and pour into sterilized glasses. Cover with paraffin.

Sweets and starchy foods given to children in too large a quantity will ruin not only their first teeth but the permanent teeth which should last into old age.

While hunting near Clearfield, Pa., William McMullen killed two deer with one bullet. A big buck got within range and he fired, the bullet going through the buck's head, killing it instantly, and then hit a doe which was hurrying by. The game warden is trying to decide whether Mr. McMullen must pay two fines, one for killing two deer in one season and the other for killing a doe.

The BABY

No mother in this enlightened age would give her baby something she did not know was perfectly harmless, especially when a few drops of plain Castoria will right a baby's stomach and end almost any little ill. Fretfulness and fever, too; it seems no time until everything is serene.

That's the beauty of Castoria; its gentle influence seems just what is needed. It does all that castor oil might accomplish, without shock to the system. Without the evil taste. It's delicious! Being purely vegetable, you can give it as often as there's a sign of colic; constipation; diarrhea; or need to aid sound, natural sleep.

Just one warning: It is genuine Fletcher's Castoria that physicians recommend. Other preparations may be just as free from all doubtful drugs, but no child of this writer's is going to test them! Besides, the book on care and feeding of babies that comes with Fletcher's Castoria is worth its weight in gold.

Fletcher's CASTORIA

One second she stood irresolute, doubting her own courage to open the door. But memory of Rand's deafness nerved her. Gripping her pistol with tense and nerveless fingers, marveling, even in that terrible moment, that she did not unconsciously press the trigger, she opened the door. A heavy black curtain hung in thick folds before it. She felt for the corner, and then, breathlessly, drew it back. Only deep blackness beyond. Following the wall on her left, she stepped, slid rather, behind the thick curtain, and guided by the touch of her fingers on the wall, moved forward slowly, breath by breath. Another heavy curtain. Exploringly she felt and fingered it, hesitating a moment to quiet her panting fears.

Suddenly there was a sound, a voice, behind the curtain right at her hand. "Let's have a look."

Gay had barely time to flatten herself against the wall, white face lowered into her dark collar, when the curtain at the other end moved and parted. No light emanated from behind it, but Gay felt that two men came out, carefully pausing to replace the heavy folds behind them, and crossed to the curtained door through which she had entered.

One drew back the black folds of curtain, and pushed the door wide.

"No sign of them." The voice was Ronald Ingram's. "They are late."

"He'll give you the devil for taking that fellow on board," said the other voice, one strange to Gay.

"There's nothing else to do with him," Ronald defended quickly. "I'm d—d if I'll croak him. Garman knows I won't. I told him when I signed on."

"If you let him get away—"

"I can't let him get away; I don't dare. He had been spying on us—God knows how long. Knows everything we're up to, of course. He'd have them after us in no time. No, we'll take him along. Garman can do as he likes. He sticks at nothing, God knows. But they're nothing on me so far. Look, there's the light, they're coming."

The men went back carefully through the heavy curtain, drawing the folds of it behind them. The blackness was like pitch. A prisoner—a spy—who knew everything! They were taking him to Garman who stuck at nothing. Dear Rand! All Gay's fears fell from her, dead courage lay cold upon her hands. Her thoughts were quiet and consistent.

"A boat is coming for them. They have taken him prisoner. Perhaps I will have a chance to rescue him—with my pistol."

Breathlessly she tiptoed to the edge of the curtain, drew it back. Still blackness within. Her fingers guided her. There was a door now, on the right side, open but thickly veiled. Her fingers touched it. Yes, a light. They were in that room. Rand was in that room, a prisoner.

She wedged her face up to the curtain where but the slightest fraction of one eye touched the aperture her fingers formed in the folds of cloth. A dozen men in the room, all dressed for cold weather, out-of-doors, heavy coats, heavy hats, gloves in their hands. They were not smoking. There was no fire in the room, but one pale lantern giving light. She saw Ronald Ingram. He was dressed as the others were, with a revolver in his hand. Others had revolvers, too. The Chinaman was there. And there was one other, hands bound behind the low chair on which he sat, his mouth tightly gagged. He too was dressed for the sea, warmly, but he sat hunched down, dejected, cowering.

"Oh, my dear," Gay thought tenderly. Tears came to her eyes. She could not see the face, she had no need. Every line of Rand's face was clear to her heart.

Ronald Ingram looked at his watch. "Be ready now," he said, in a low voice. "Go one at a time. Follow May Sen. Walk slowly, feel your way, we can't show a light. Don't talk. You cannot smoke until we are well out to sea. Hodge, you take the prisoner with you, and go first after May Sen. The rest fall in after Hodge. I'll bring up the rear. Not a sound when we go out." Then he crossed swiftly to the dejected figure of the prisoner. "Now mind what I told you," he said. His voice was low, incisive. "If you make the slightest sound, the least effort to get away—he turned his revolver in his hands suggestively—"that for your pains! You know this place, you know this cove—you haven't a chance in the world to escape. Be ready now, fellows."

The men stood up, drew on their gloves. Gay slipped away from the curtain, back to the second one, beyond it.

"A boat is coming—they are taking Rand with them—they are all armed, and he is bound." How her thoughts raced!

Outside in the night again, she stood flat against the wall and waited. It was in her heart to touch Rand as he passed, to draw him out of the line as they walked, perhaps escaping notice in the darkness. Motionless she waited, cool, alert, holding her breath.

There was sudden sound on the shore of the cove, the low plash of oars, a low whistle, the scraping and grinding of a boat on the sand, and again the low whistle.

Then, without a sound from within, the curtain at her hand was drawn aside. The little Chinaman came out and padded softly down toward the shore, his head lowered, looking neither to right nor left. After him came the tall man, Hodge of course, a revolver in one hand, the other thrust through the bound one of the prisoner. Gay's fingers ached about her pistol, but she knew any use of it at that moment would mean only death to Rand, and to herself as well. Perhaps later she might have a chance—he was a strong swimmer—if she could only manage to release the bonds that held him.

Still from behind the curtain came the silent, closely cloaked figures, one after another, silently, and at last no more. But there was a sound within, the drawing of curtains, the click of a latch, the slide of a wooden frame.

Gay did not hesitate. Stumbling a little, she moved out swiftly into the line of silently marching men. Blindly, automatically, unhesitatingly, she followed them, but in her blindness she fell full length on the rocky path.

Ronald Ingram came upon her from behind. She felt the touch of his boot at her shoulder.

"Get up, d—n it, and be careful!" His voice was low, less than a whisper.

Gay scrambled to her feet, and hurried after the others. A hand was held out from the boat to assist her, and she was swung up in her turn, with Ronald Ingram behind her, the last man on.

"O. K.?" breathed a voice from the boat.

"Yeh. Let's go."

The boat boat crunched on the sand again, swept into the water. The oars dipped the waves. A fine exaltation came over Gay. She was daring death with Rand. If she could not contrive to save him, then she, who had selfishly refused to share his life, would gloriously share his death.

The boat headed swiftly out to sea, and the fine salt spray touched her face.

CHAPTER XII

No one questioned Gay's presence in the boat, no one so much as looked her way, or offered her a word. She dropped upon the bench, cowering, just where she was pushed in the pushing crowd. Shyly at first she kept her face lowered into her collar, but later, gaining courage, she dared to look about in search of Rand. Her eyes found him at last where he sat crowded between two others on the opposite side, and there was no opportunity for her to draw nearer to him at that moment.

The three men, Ingram and Hodge, with the one in charge of the boat, stood together and talked. Gay was beside them, but their voices were so low that she could catch only scattered words of what they said, and none but Ingram's, whose voice was familiar.

"Hanging around spying—No, d—n it, business is one thing, but murder is murder. Do as you like, but I can't have a hand in it. Remember Blakely. Nothing on me but smuggling and coast running. Few years at most. I've got mine salted away, too, believe me."

"Remember Blakely." Was it Blakely who had come to her in the cove, with the bullet wound in his brow? Not Ingram, then, who caused that gashing wound, but another, Garman, to whom they were taking Rand. Gay's fingers fondled her pistol, tentatively, but well she realized that any such action would be worse than folly, for these were desperate men, and they were armed. Ingram might stick at murder in cold blood, but self-defense would put a different color on his scruples. If she could only get to Rand, slip her pistol into his hands, release his bonds. Still there was no opportunity, and she could think of no subtle expedient to contrive her ends.

She would have liked to fling herself across the intervening space and put both arms tenderly about those drooping shoulders.

"If I dared, I would. How surprised they would be. 'Rand,' I'd say, 'kiss me.' I dare say they would all drop dead of astonishment." Her teeth chattered nervously, her knees trembled, cold little smiles wrinkled her lips. "I am going to laugh," she thought. "I know I am simply going to scream with laughter. How absurd this is. Going to sea with a band of murderers—Ridiculous. People don't do such things. Such things don't happen. I must be losing my mind, I dare say I am crazy, as they think on the island." A low dry chuckle gurgled through her cold lips. The man at her side turned.

"Cold," he muttered. "They don't put themselves out much to give service, eh?"

Gay's reply was an indistinguishable murmur, but she guarded her thoughts more closely.

The men smoked thirstily. She felt they were not fellows of a common hand, but separate, each for himself, except Ronald Ingram, Hodge and the little Chinaman, and the men who manned this boat. The others held aloof, nor did Ingram show any spirit of camaraderie to one of them. It was some sinister personal business that brought these men together.

Suddenly, in the darkness ahead, the lights of a ship showed up, lights green, and red, and pale.

Gay fingered her pistol nervously, tempted to fire desperately for help, taking the chance that help would come. Watching warily she waited a moment. The boat seemed to be heading direct for the ship, not avoiding it; yes, they were making for it. That ship, then, was Garman's, where they were taking Rand. There was no signaling between the two that she could see, but the great majestic monster of the sea slowed, came to a stop, and the small boat pulled alongside.

Ronald Ingram nodded toward the prisoner. "Bring him, Hodge," he said, and then ran quickly up the ladder first of all.

Hodge and the Chinaman prodded Rand up and shoved him to the ladder, which he climbed nimbly enough, though he must have been stiff with the cold and the exposure, as were they all. Gay's first impulse was to crowd forward, to go up the ladder after him, but remembering in time that a nearer view of her person might disclose a lack of mannishness in spite of her boots and knickers, she hung modestly back. One after another they hurried up, and the Chinaman indicated her forward.

Already the ship was heading east, as the men shambled forward into the corridor and up the stairs into the warm bright smoking room. Gay slipped into a corner in the shadow of the door and crouched there, watchful, catlike.

Hodge came in with the prisoner, shoved him unceremoniously into a seat on the opposite side of the door, beyond Gay's sight, and went quickly out again.

She slid forward in her seat and peered under the projection of the door to the opposite corner where Rand sat alone, dejected and sullen.

No Appeal Possible From Birds' Judgment

Most people have seen large numbers of birds gathered together in a field or on a hill. But how many know they were probably holding a court-martial on one of their fellows?

These bird courts are held periodically, chiefly by crows, ravens, or sparrows. The prisoner is brought into the court and a general croaking ensues until judgment is delivered.

Should the unfortunate bird be found guilty, it is set on by the rest and pecked to death. Stealing sticks from another bird's nest is, apparently, a crime that does not call for such drastic punishment. Six or so of the other birds simply proceed to break up the offender's own nest!

Should an offender in the sparrows' his chin far down in the woolen collar of his coat.

Daring the bright lights, she got up and crossed the room quickly, slipping into the seat beside him, her arm lying against his.

At the unexpected touch and pressure, he threw himself back in his seat suddenly and looked at her. For the first time she saw his face. She never knew how she repressed the cry of horror that rose instinctively to her lips at the sight of him. She had never seen him before. The face was sly, vicious, hard, the most evil face of all she had seen that night.

It was not Rand. She was alone at sea with the murderous band.

Her flesh crawled upon her quivering nerves as she shrank back. She was sure he could not fail to hear the great pounding of her heart in her throat, the sob on her lips.

Rand, Rand!—The name beat in her ears, throbbed in her pulses. Sheer terror, panic seized her. She grew frantic in terror and despair. She edged away from him, farther, farther, until she reached the door, where she peered out into the dim corridor. Now and then sounded the whir of bells from below; the spit of steam and the pound of the engines increased.

The corridor was empty, dimly lighted. Gay edged outside the door and stood a moment uncertainly. Door down the corridor, to the right and the left. One stood open—a cabin—there were chairs, a desk, bright lights. If only she could gain access to some passenger, some traveler, she thought she could not fail to gain protection. Gay slid slowly along the wall until she was beyond sight of those in the smoking room. Then, with a desperate flying leap, she gained the open door, the shelter of the cabin. It was empty of occupant.

Steps sounded on the stairs leading up to the smoking room, a voice called orders.

Gay flashed a frightened glance about the room. Beneath a shelf of books along the wall of the cabin a wide bunk was made up, the blankets turned back. Beneath the bunk showed a foot locker. But the bunk was wide, and Gay was not large. With movements quick as thought itself, she squirmed under the bunk at the foot, behind the locker, and wriggled up until she was out of sight from the room. In the silence she moved up a little, so that she could stare out from behind the shadow of the foot locker.

The cabin was unusually large, with a bath adjoining. The desk was covered with books, papers, writing equipment. There was a typewriter. On the walls were files of papers, more books, professional instruments, and on a row of hooks were coats, caps, uniforms—men's things. Gay's heart sank. It was a man's room, a seaman's room. There was gold braid on the cuff of the coats on the walls, four stripes.

"Oh, dear heaven," gasped Gay. "It is Garman's cabin!"

Her eyes swam dizzily, her head reeled. Garman—who didn't stick at murder—poor Blakely—

Instinctively, half realizing what she was about, she started to shudder out, feet first, from beneath the bunk. But she was stayed by sudden noises, steps and voices in the corridor.

"Bring us coffee, Burt.—Come on in, Ingram.—Cold as the devil."

The voice was deep, assured, with a pleasant quality in its depth.

Two men, Ronald Ingram and the captain, stepped quickly into the room, pulled off their gloves and wraps, drew chairs up to the desk, their backs to the bunk.

Gay, crouching there in her stuffy woolen garments, watched them furtively, one eye riveted to the captain between the trunk and the great boot. A large figure, broad, not tall, with a massive head, and dark soft hair in great abundance. The face was like the face of a saint, mild and spiritual, very dark. The lashes of the eyes were dark and silken, the eyes both mild and kind. Gay's fears stilled a little at sight of his benevolent face.

He busied himself with the papers until the boy came with coffee, which both men accepted in silence. As soon as he had gone, the captain took up the business in hand: "Papers all right?"

"Fine. Best set he ever turned out. Perfect."

Timepiece Hailed as Unique Among Clocks

What is said to be the most intelligent clock on earth was recently invented by Frank Fontana, a San Francisco jeweler. The unique timepiece not only tells the time in San Francisco and 23 other cities at the same time, but it also gives the moon phase, date and day. Although the entire clock is only 18 by 18 inches square it contains something like 500 separate parts, most of which are in plain view. It took the inventor seven months to build the clock.

As early as the Eighteenth century it was very common practice for clocks to be equipped to tell, besides the time, the month, the day of the month, phases of the moon, etc. But for some reason the practice did not become general. Notwithstanding, the modern "prince of clocks" holds the record of all time in the number of performances.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Death Costly Affair Among the Blackfeet

Among curious customs observed by Indian tribes at the death of a member, the Blackfeet of the territory around the headwaters of the Missouri river had one of the most inexplicable. At the decease of a child the father went outside his lodge and placing earth upon his head wailed loudly. This vocal tolling of bells notified the tribesmen of the sad event and they would come rushing to the lodge to take possession of all the portable property therein they could find. The grief-stricken parents were stripped of all other worldly possessions, sometimes not even excepting their clothing. Relatives of the deceased child attested their grief by cutting off their fingers—the number of joints severed displaying the degree of their sorrow. Any relative who merely wept at the funeral was looked upon with disdain.—Detroit News.

History in Legends

An Indian chief has dictated to his secretaries a history of his tribe from the creation of the world as it is related in legends.

Erlend Nordenski, the Swedish explorer, who has just returned from Panama, has brought back a copy of the history, which he regards as one of the trophies of his expedition.

His special interest was the Cuna tribe of the Atlantic coast. They are people of good intelligence and culture who cling to their old traditions. The chief who dictated the history employs two secretaries, one familiar with English, the other with Spanish.

Roads Can Be Built Without Gas Tax Says Chas. Hayes

"With the gas tax dead, the question sometimes asked now is: 'What will become of road building?' runs a statement issued by Charles M. Hayes, president of the Chicago Motor Club. 'Certainly, all the roads on the $100,000,000 bond issue system can be built without a penny of gas tax money,' says Mr. Hayes. 'As for the various counties, they are in better position now than they were before the tax was declared illegal. The state must now refund one-half the cost of State Aid roads built by the counties and paid for with county funds.'

"Proponents of the tax are in the habit of pointing out that most of the states in the Union have a gas tax, with the implied idea that the lack of a tax indicates backwardness on the part of Illinois. The other states that get along without a tax are the great commonwealths of New York and Massachusetts.

"But the situation in Illinois is far different from the situation in any other state. No other state has issued road bonds in such large amounts as has Illinois; and on December 31, 1927, no other state had completed as many miles of concrete roads 18 feet in width as had Illinois. It is folly, therefore, to compare the road situation in Illinois with that of any other state.

In conclusion, Mr. Hayes says: "Motorists of Illinois are paying for the roads now, although some gas tax enthusiasts seem to believe that the motorists started to build roads only with the enactment of the gas tax. Approximately $15,000,000 was paid into the road fund by motorists last year. The registration fees will be more than sufficient to build all the roads on the bond issue systems, retire principal and interest, and pay for maintenance."

Important Waterway

The Suez canal, opened in 1869, has a length of 101 miles, and a minimum width of 147 feet, 8 inches. The maximum draught of water allowed for vessels using the canal is 32 feet. The average time for transit through the canal is 15 hours 20 minutes. The canal is owned by a company, and Great Britain holds a controlling interest in the company.

Remembering a Happy Day

EVERY telephone added to this system during the past ten years has required an average investment higher than for those installed ten years ago. This condition will apply to each telephone added for many years, if present price levels hold. The company is powerless to control these advances.

NOTHING so warm and cheers the heart as to be remembered by relatives and dear friends on some pleasant anniversary. And there is no pleasant way of extending congratulations and good wishes than by telephone.

Distance need be no barrier. Though hundreds or thousands of miles may separate friends, Bell long distance lines will bring them face to face. A telephone call is easier, quicker and less formal than a letter. It carries the intimate, personal touch which might otherwise be lost.

SUNDAY EVENING SERVICES

The special Sunday evening services at the Worth Community Church are being very well received. A week ago Sunday Mr. Olafson of Iceland gave a very interesting talk on "Iceland and its People." The church was full and all enjoyed the talk very much.

After Easter it is planned to have a series of special lectures by men of different countries giving talks on their countries. This will give the people an understanding of the people of other lands.

Rev. Povenmire gave the second of his illustrated talks on the "Life of Christ." These lead up to Easter Sunday. Next Sunday he will give the third in the series.

Give Cows to Needy

To reduce the hazards of fellow settlers in the first few years of farming, Zoutpansberg (Africa) branch of the 1920 Settlers' Memorial association has evolved a plan whereby every member of the branch undertakes to give a good cow to any member experiencing difficulty in getting a start. A needy settler will thus receive 30 to 40 good cows with which he will be able to overcome his difficulties and begin anew.

Attention, Middle-Aged Women!

Fort Wayne, Ind.—"Dr. Pierce's medicines were a life saver to me at middle age. When I reached that period it seemed that I had all the ailments and distress that can come to a woman. My nerves gave away, I was so weak that some days I was not able to be on my feet at all. I had hot flashes, dizzy spells, backache and pains thru my sides. I was a complete physical wreck when I began taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and 'Golden Medical Discovery.' These medicines soon ended the suffering and distress and brought me thru this critical period a strong healthy woman."—Mrs. Ida Jackman, 421½ Baker St.
